Dear Donald,

It was a pleasure to meet you again at Dressed to Kilt in New York and to hear about the launch of your planned investment in Scotland.

As we look forward to stronger working relations with you and the Trump Organization, including your interest in helping us, I want to personally invite you to join Globalscot - an international network of Scots and those with an affinity for Scotland who are committed to advancing Scotland's economic development agenda.

Scotland has become one of the most transformed economies in Europe with sectors such as tourism, finance, electronics, biotechnology dominating a modern and diverse economy. Almost 900 Globalscot members - very senior business people from across the world who are active in these sectors - are now making an invaluable contribution to Scotland's continued transformation.

Globalscot members are working with some of Scotland's most promising companies, providing advice on their strategies and operations and helping them to identify and exploit international opportunities. Globalscots are advising on the design and development of key projects, providing invaluable market and technology intelligence and are involved in programmes to raise the aspirations of Scotland's young people.

While I know that you will have limited time in your busy business schedule I would hope that we could call on you to help when it might be relevant and appropriate. You have already been an outstanding spokesperson for Scotland. Globalscot would present an opportunity to do more of that. It would also be important if my team in the US, led by Lorna Jack, might be able to work with your own executives if opportunities emerge which might be mutually beneficial.

I should welcome your participation in the Globalscot programme because I believe that your experience, knowledge and skills can make a tangible impact on our economic development efforts.

I very much hope that you will accept my invitation and in so doing play a vital role in assisting Scotland's economic success as one of the world's most connected small nations.

Best wishes
